Only an hour away from Marrakesh you will find the wonderful valleys at the foot of the Atlas Mountains. Here live Berber, a North African ethnic group and most of the Moroccan population. If you follow this road, you will see red valleys traversed by various mountain streams, called Oued. The changing colors, in keeping with the seasons, illuminate the orchards on which the herds of the village graze. If you arrive in one of the Kasbah villages, you will be welcomed in the house of the local family in accordance with tradition.

Here ladies and gentlemen you will appreciate the simple and authentic way of life that has been alive for over a thousand years. A hike or a mule ride will help you enjoy the beauty of the snowy foothills of Toubkal in winter - the mountain that looks down from the highest peak in the Atlas Mountains.

After lunch with the Berber family, or in the famous house of Sir Charles Branson, Kasbah Tamadot, or in Kasbah Toubkal, you return peacefully to Marrakesh, where you will enjoy the scents of our aromatic garden on the way. Here you will find all the aromatic plants that are used in traditional Moroccan beauty treatments.

You can also watch the village's women making argan oil or accompany Mr. Berber through the old history and tradition of Berber rugs from various regions of Morocco, where you will discover the most varied Berber rugs, different weaving techniques and one of the Berber's largest galleries, which supplies the whole city of Marrakech / Fes but also many bazzars in europe with rugs.
